July

Alana Clampitt

President's Krausening

Paul Klammer

The best thirsts in life are unquenchable. Some of mine are long bike rides (they never go far enough), backpacking hikes (never high enough or long enough), and hanging with distant family and friends (is there ever enough time before goodbyes?).

For most of us, brewing is an unquenchable thirst too. When is the last time you felt that you were all caught up on your plans and don't know or care about what to brew next? From time to time I don't know what book to read next, what music I want to listen too, or where I want to go on my next hike, but as a certified binge brewer deciding what to make next is never a problem. My plans already stretch farther than I ever hope to complete in my lifetime. They even include brewing legacy beers that will last longer than me. This does not stop me from adding to my plans. What makes a person who is already hopelessly behind with their beer brewing plans decide that it's time to get serious about making more ciders, and start making mead, and look into figuring out how to make beer as it was done 150 years ago, and, and, and . . . yeah, I don't know about people like that either. Must be a home brewer!

July Recap

We did pretty well at the Ohio Brew Week Competition in Athens! Congratulations to Mike Ontolchik, Jessica Ihms, Andrew Mitchell, Jay O'Neill, Greg Irving*, and Erica Anton for all getting metals and/or honorable mentions. Special congratulations to Mike, who got a honorable mention for best in show, and to Jessica who took home bronze for the Jim Leverentz highest medal winning award.

Our July night out ended up at Beer Women Rock - an annual fundraising event. The beer and the company was great. If any of you happened to win anything they don't need in the raffle, bring it to the next meeting for the SNOBS raffle!

Check out this article about Beer Women Rock - and about women in the beer industry in general.
