UPCOMING COLLABORATIONS

Two Collaborations are taking place for beers that will be available for Cleveland Beer Week. Fat Heads is going to be brewing and canning another SNOB Wet Hop IPA. Bookhouse is going to be doing a beer with us too. These are coming up fast. Let VP John Majetic know if you're interested in participating in either one. Team sizes are limited. vicepresident@beersnobs.org

NEXT MEETING: FOOD AND BEER PAIRING

Chef Vinnie Cimino is an alum of Greenhouse Tavern, Trentina, and also Ken Stewarts and Michael's Genuine and Summer House. He worked with Cara

Baker to develop the beer-centric menu for Immigrant Son but left there when she did in support of her. He will bring.

food samples and we will provide beer pairings to accompany the discussion

President's Krausening

Spring has its Bocks. Summer has it's wheat beer and IPA's, But Fall is perhaps the beeriest season of all. Autumn is associated with harvest season when the grains and hops are harvested. It's the time of the year when Germany holds its famous two week-long Oktoberfest celebration. Beers of this season begin to feel less refreshing and are more aimed at being maltier, spicier and with heavier bodied. Fall is the season to add these fuller flavors to your brew schedule and your refrigerator. I've noticed as we are approaching Labor day that the store shelves are already filling up with pumpkin and spice beers, ambers, Belgians and fest styles.

It's a busy time of year for us SNOBs too. The weeks ahead are packed with opportunities. We have SNOBtoberfest, Cleveland Beer Week, Son of Brewzilla , two brewery collaborations and some really good club meetings coming up this fall. It doesn't matter where your interests lie, there are events for everyone. Whether you are looking to learn, collaborate, compete or simply socialize and appreciate the many styles facets of the beer world we have something for you. For many of us, it's not one or the other, it is 'all of the above'. Yes, it's a great time of year to be a SNOB.

Cheers,

Jay

Brewing for Meetings

Want to help us get the most out of a future meeting? Participate by brewing and bringing something in! Here are some upcoming meetings to get started on now...

November Meeting – Rich, dark beers

In November we're going to focus on dark, rich winter styles. Do you have a favorite you want to brew, share and discuss? Let Jay know what you can bring. Thanks!

Let Jay know if you would like to participate by sending an email to president@beersnobs.org

January Meeting – Balancing Cider

For January, 2022's meeting, we will be practicing balancing a cider. If you want to participate fully, its time to start making some cider! Not sure how? Watch the presentation from August's meeting:

Get Involved!

We know this seems early to be talking about this. But we want to ask if anyone has an interest in getting a little more involved in the club this year and becoming an officer next year. This year you could help plan a meeting or two, a night out or an activity or event. We'd especially like to recruit some of our younger members to get involved in running the club and to keep the club moving forward. Let any officer know if you are interested.
